

FLOOD RISK LEVEL ALONG THE STREAM

The floodplains along the river are divided into three types: natural forests and wetlands with strong flood storage functions; cultivated land and grasslands that partially retain water but are easily eroded; and hardened ground and built-up land that have lost their water storage and filtration functions.

Source: Ruofan Lin. Retrieved from:<https://data.nature.cz/ds/105>